The car industry is considered one of the most archetypal global industries. Nevertheless, it looks more like a world of regions rather than a fully integrated global one. Does regionalism prevail over or complement globalization? Moreover, is there still room for unilateral (go-it-alone) strategies? This volume addresses these questions from the perspective of the car industry, the most important industrial 'carrier' of these developments. Cars, Carriers of Regionalism? provides an integral account of the geo-economic and geo-political dilemmas and opportunities faced by the car industry in developed as well as developing countries at the start of the 21st century. All major regional integration initiatives are covered and their feasibility is assessed, including go-it-alone efforts. This volume - written by leading scholars who have participated to the GERPISA international network's four-year research programme Globalization or Regionalisation for the Auto Industry? - is intended for both academics and practitioners/managers.

Project scheduling problems are, generally speaking, the problems of allocating scarce resources over time to perform a given set of activities. The resources are nothing other than the arbitrary means which activities complete for. Also the activities can have a variety of interpretations. Thus, project scheduling problems appear in a large spectrum of real-world situations, and, in consequence, they have been intensively studied for almost forty years. Almost a decade has passed since the multi-author monograph: R. Slowinski, I. Węglarz (eds.

), Advances in Project Scheduling, Elsevier, 1989, summarizing the state-of-the-art across project scheduling problems, was published. Since then, considerable progress has been made in all directions of modelling and finding solutions to these problems. Thus, the proposal by Professor Frederick S. Hillier to edit a handbook which reports on the recent advances in the field came at an exceptionally good time and motivated me to accept the challenge. Fortunately, almost all leading experts in the field have accepted my invitation and presented their completely new advances often combined with expository surveys. Thanks to them, the handbook stands a good chance of becoming a key reference point on the current state-of-the-art in project scheduling, as well as on new directions in the area. The contents are divided into four parts. The first one, dealing with classical models -exact algorithms, is preceded by a proposition of the classification scheme for scheduling problems.

neural networks, heuristics and metaheuristics using techniques such as metaheuristics, statistical techniques, machine learning and hyper-heuristics. The book first defines the field of automated design, distinguishing it from the similar but different topics of automated algorithm configuration and automated algorithm selection. The chapters report on the current state of the art by experts in the field and include reviews of AutoML and automated design of search, theoretical analyses of automated algorithm design, automated design of control software for robot swarms, and overfitting as a benchmark and design tool. Also covered are automated generation of constructive and perturbative low-level heuristics, selection hyper-heuristics for automated design, automated design of deep-learning approaches using hyper-heuristics, genetic programming hyper-heuristics with transfer knowledge and automated design of classification algorithms. The book concludes by examining future research directions of this rapidly evolving field. The information presented here will especially interest researchers and
