Except from Dry Stories When Anne Winter looked down at the face of her first-born, she felt that motherhood was the supreme event of a woman's existence. She had been a clever artist in her time; had painted some pictures that people talked of noisily, had decorated the ceiling of a big church in a big town, and done a portrait in oil of one of the ladies of the cabinet. But on a certain January morning all this seemed mere nothingness to the light touch of tiny pink fingers like a drift of rose leaves on her breast. The babe had wailed because it had come into this big, brutal world, and when she had hushed its wailing, it seemed to her that she, Anne Winter, for the first time counted for something in this world. For the first time, she was. a real factor in the history of humanity. Her psychic senses seemed so quickened that the simplest things had a new significance, and everything in earth or heaven circled about that infant's head.
